

Presently my soul grew str hesitating then no longer, said I, "or Madam, truly yo giveness I implore; But the is I was napping, and so ge you came rapping, And so you came tapping, tapping chamber door. That I scarc sure I heard you" — here I ned wide the door — Darkn there, and nothing more. I into that darkness peering I stood there wondering, fe doubting, dreaming dream mortals ever dared to drea fore. But the silence was u ken, and the stillness gave token, and the only word t

*Presently my soul grew strong itating then no longer, "Sir," s
"or Madam, truly your forgiv I implore; But the fact is I was ping, and so gently you came ping, And so faintly you came ping, tapping at my chamber That I scarce was sure I heard here I opened wide the door — ness there, and nothing more. into that darkness peering, lo I stood there wondering, feari doubting, dreaming dreams r tals ever dared to dream befor the silence was unbroken, and stillness gave no token, and th word there spoken was the wh red word, "Lenore!" This I wh*

Presently my soul grew s ger; hesitating then no lo "Sir," said I, "or Madam, t ly your forgiveness I imp But the fact is I was napp and so gently you came r ping, and so faintly you c tapping, tapping at my ch ber door. That I scarce wa I heard you"— here I open wide the door — Darkness re, and nothing more. De into that darkness peerin long I stood there wonde fearing, doubting, dream dreams no mortals ever c ed to dream before. But t lence was unbroken, and