Rumba

Rumba got its name from the Cuban and Catalan music style. As with rumba songs, these letters move their axes and change the strokes. Laura Meseguer, its author, created the three styles based on the same model, but with varying contrast, construction and degrees of expressiveness. Small is recommended for text, Large for headlines and Extra for words. Rumba is available only in OpenType Std format, supporting CE and most Latin-based languages, with typographic features, but without the support of Cyrillic, Greek and Small Caps.
