

CONTAX PRO

The role of the patrol has been
USE OF HAND SIGNALS
provide beneficial service to children and help them
WEARING WHITE OR BRIGHT ORANGE possible turning vehicles
SCHOOL CROSSING
Patrols (or 'Lollipop' people) as they HELD IN 2003 TO MARK THE FIFTIETH
The proper hand signal for a guard to alert
LEGISLATION THAT ALLOWS SCHOOL CROSSING requires a guard to raise his TRAINING GUIDELINES

School Crossing Patrols (or 'Lollipop' people as they are often known), provide a beneficial service to many children (and indeed adults), helping them cross the roads safely on their way to and from school each day.

In the Harrogate area, there are twenty three sites where crossing patrols work, of which five are currently vacant.

The legislation that allows school crossing patrols to operate originally came into force in 1953, and a series of celebratory events were held in 2003 to mark the fiftieth anniversary of this Act.

As you can imagine, the volume of traffic has increased somewhat since 1953, and as a result, the role of the patrol has changed to red